ASSAULTS ON PORT ARTHUR.

DESPERATE FIGHTING.

SAID-TO-HAND COMPLETION.

JAPANESE HOLD WATERWORKS.

RUSSIAN MAIN FORTS MENACED.

KUPATSKIN'S FLANK IN DANGER.

A SECOND RUSSIAN ARMY FORMING.

LONDON, Sept. 26.

The bombardment of Port Arthur

hours, and was extremely fierce.

The fact

of shells falling from quarters previously silent positions, that there are many heavy guns in new positions.

On the 20th instant the Japanese right and centre advanced on both sides of the railway, using pucker

trucks and sparse natural cover as a protection. Six small forts which had previously been in the hands of the Japanese, and which were situated on the north-east and south-east points of the peninsula,

were captured.

When the fire of Fort Kupatshin was silenced, the Japanese moved forward, and the Russian water supply was cut off. The Japanese stormed it, and two other important positions.

Later,

the Japanese made a desperate assault

on the main fort, and the positions captured. The Japanese claim that they killed 1000 men, while the Russians claim that they killed 1000 men and wounded 1000.

On the night of September 20 the Japanese captured a fort west of Itan,

three miles west by north of the entrance,

after a fierce fight. During the assault

they were exposed to the fire of machine guns. When the Japanese got inside they found the fort was a ruin, and the defenders had been killed.

PETERBURG AND SMOLENSK.

SAIL FOR LIBAU.

LONDON, Sept. 25.

The steamers Petersburg and Smolensk, of the Russian fleet, are at Port Said awaiting permission to take aboard supplies of coal and provisions sufficient to carry them to Libau, in the Mediterranean.

A request made by the two steamers for sufficient coal and provisions to enable them to reach Libau, in the Baltic, was refused.

Sept. 26.

After the Smolensk and the Petersburg had been ordered to sail for Libau, the H.M.S. Furious, 5700 tons (second-class cruiser), Captain H. L. Tottenham, should be in readiness to leave Port Said at two hours' notice have been cancelled.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

LONDON, Sept. 25.

A temperature of 44 degrees is being registered at night in Manchuria, and is causing serious discomfort to General Kurat's army, which is clad in khaki, and is sleeping out of doors. Supplies of winter clothes for the troops are, however, arriving.

The Japanese of the Commissariat Department at St. Petersburg have been ordered to furnish the Japanese army with explosives in 17 wagon loads of mines intended for the front.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

JUDGE PARKER'S PLATFORM.

A POLICY OF RESTRAINT.

LONDON, Sept. 26.

Judge Parker, in accepting the nomination of the Democratic party to the Presidency of the United States, advocated protection tariff reform and legislation to control trusts if the present existing laws are inadequate for that purpose.

Judge Parker advocated the avoidance of entangling foreign alliances, and urged the United States to maintain the role of a continental policeman and foreign debt collector. It should be sufficient for her to see that the other American States are enabled to work out their destiny without European coercion.

General Oriskany, who has been disgraced, was picked up by his Commander-in-Chief as the general responsible for the necessity of a retreat from Liao-yang. Although Kurat's army had been successful in capturing the Russian army, he was sufficiently successful to make the position untenable. For that partial success of the Japanese First Army General Oriskany has been adjudged guilty of incompetency.

THE FISCAL ISSUE.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AND LORD ROSEBURY.

INTERPRETER OF THE COLONIES' VIEWS.

LONDON, Sept. 26.

Mr. Chamberlain, in a letter to the "Times" on the attitude of Lord Rosebury to the colonies on the preferential tariff question, says: "Lord Rosebury's Imperial Liberalism has degenerated. He fears the motives and intentions of the colonies in supporting preference with the notional because without the holding of a conference it will be impossible to say beforehand what will be the precise conditions of the mutual understanding."

"Lord Rosebury and his little Englishmen have a very poor idea of the role of the colonies in the world. It is possible that Lord Rosebury's profound knowledge of colonial human nature has convinced him that our kinsmen will take all and give nothing."

Mr. Chamberlain has published the telegram which he has just received from the Federal Council of the United Kingdom of Manufacturers of all Australia, reconfirming its assurance of unanimous support of his fiscal policy, and is inviting himself and Mr. Chamberlain to visit Australia.

A COURIER OF FORTUNE. BUILDINGS AND WORKS. BY A. W. MARCHMONT.

Gabrielle heard Lucette's story with intense interest, and saw that with help from Pascal outside, might be possible to get Gerard away from Morvix without concealing his first in the Duchesse's apartments; and she resolved to go immediately to Lucette to consult with her.

"But I must see Lucette," she urged.

"That is not to be done," she said. "If you go and then return to me, Gabrielle, it may prove notice and start suspicion."

"But I must see Lucette," she urged.

"You will know what I shall need for a few days, Lucette," said Gabrielle, with a swift warning glance. "And if I have forgotten anything, will you bring it to me or even run to it, how is Denny?"

"Much improved, but very weak, of course, and fretting at his confinement," she said. "I wish to speak with you, mademoiselle."

"I am a constant nurse," she said with the Duchesse, and she was sending instructions to her maid to go to the Duchesse's room.

"That is in good time," she said.

"One thing more, Lucette, and the most important of all—M. de Probalie is not to be allowed to enter the maison until my return."

"That is a harsh injunction, mademoiselle," she said.

"I am the mistress of Malcoire, my lord," she said.

"I shall hope to change that resolve among others," she replied, as Lucette went away.

"I have spoken with your uncle," she said.

"He is no longer in my mind," she said.

"Well, with M. de Probalie, then, I have composed myself, but he has no motive save that of serving your best interests."

"As head of my house, monsieur, it is for me to say who shall marry and who shall not," she said.

"I do not know," he replied bluntly. "Who is he, if he is not indeed this De Cobalt?"

"I have clear proof," she said.

"I do not know," he replied bluntly. "Who is he, if he is not indeed this De Cobalt?"

"The letter may have been but a trick, like all the others," she said.

"I believe in the truth what he avowed himself at the first—Gerard de Cobalt."

"But you yourself and M. de Probalie had disagreed."

SOME COUNTRY ENTERPRISES. A.M.P. SOCIETY PREMISES AT TAMWORTH.

Two or three years ago the A.M.P. Society started a branch of its business in Tamworth in rented premises. The movement was so successful that a piece of land in Peel-street, the main thoroughfare of the town, was purchased, and instructions given to Mr. Philip R. Ransland, a local architect, to prepare plans for a two-story brick building, to be used as the future head centre of the society in the northern districts. Last week tenders were called for this work, and the building will have a frontage to Peel-street of 32 ft. The front will be carried out in cement to the Italian design and decorated by the emblematic group of the society, "Peace and Plenty."

It has been decided to call for fresh tenders to close on September 30, for the remodeling of the clove of Arts at Newcastle. Mr. Ernest C. Yeomans, of Newcastle, is the architect.

Last week a tender was accepted by the City Council, for the remodeling of the clove of Arts at Newcastle. Mr. Ernest C. Yeomans, of Newcastle, is the architect.

During last week tenders were accepted for the following works:—
